Mr. Buthod said that library cards have been distributed to all Jefferson County Public School and Catholic Archdiocese students in the past year. He noted that the special library cards were being used by students to check out 1000 books a day.

Chairman’s Report:
Rae Horton stated that she is encouraged by the presence of the Metro Council members, noting we (Library Advisory Commission) have a mission to provide the best possible service to patrons. She said that the needs of the community for library service are as urgent as ever, that the goals of the library’s master plan are as critical as ever, and that the Library Commission is as committed as ever to achieving those goals.

She reiterated that the library and the Library Advisory Commission are more than ready to work with the council to get what the library needs.

Dr. Wooden echoed the comments of Rae Horton, confirming a long-term commitment to meet the goals of the Master Facilities Plan.
Councilman King reported that a bipartisan workgroup of seven council members was formed in December to find a way to fund the library’s expansion needs. He said the working group wants to work with the Mayor and his administration to find funding for new branches and renovations, understanding that the library is working on a scaled back expansion plan.

Councilman Downard said “We are serious. We need to elevate the library in the money game.”

Councilman Fleming said that the Metro Council also needs to assure the libraries and the public that the funding will remain in place through future Councils.

Councilman Heiner said “I’ve learned that citizens feel library improvements must be made. The libraries will not remain status quo. It’s time to bring library services up to par, the level they should be. It’s the library’s time.”

Councilman King addressed the difference between capital dollars and operating costs. “We need to figure out how much we can afford to add to the library’s operating budgets to go along with the capital expansion.” Library Commission chair Rae Horton agreed, saying “We don’t want to be in the position of building libraries we can’t afford to operate.”

Members of the library commission emphasized that the council members’ earlier offer to come up with a dollar amount available for library expansion will be critical for the library’s planning.

Councilman King concluded by saying the council work group will come up with a dollar amount that can be made available for library construction and a figure for future operating budget growth.

Tad Thomas asked council member Hal Heiner if the library can expect to receive the 200 million dollars he promised during his campaign against the library referendum. Council member Heiner said that did not appear likely.

Councilman Heiner said he hoped the Library Foundation would still support the library expansion efforts.

Mr. Buthod said he believed the Library Foundation would be a very energetic partner once they see what the City has committed to library expansion.

Chair Rae Horton, on behalf of the entire Commission, reconfirmed the Commission’s intention to work with the Council. Another bond will be issued at a later date for construction. He said the council is excited about this project moving forward. “We will find ways to fund it.” he said. “We are waiting for the library to tell us what you need.”

Beth Sternberg said the task group, consisting of council members King, Pugh, Heiner and Call, says their report includes the entire plan as we know it and is currently on their web site. It is the financing plan and vision as the task force sees it.

Councilman Stuckel said the vision of the task force is to serve the underserved areas of Metro Louisville.

Mr. Buthod asked how the Metro Council will build support for continuing funds for capital and operations.

Councilman Stuckel acknowledged that the Metro Council cannot promise future funds of future councils, noting that the feeling of support is strong for the library and he believes support will remain strong.
Councilman Stuckel said people get enthused about the tangible; we need plans, something in hand, to keep enthusiasm strong.

Chair Horton thanked Councilman Stuckel for his comments.

Dr. Wooden explained to the commissioners that one of the things analyzed is population served by each branch. That is done by assigning all census tracts to a specific library and studying demographic patterns and natural and manmade barriers.

Dr. Wooden said the Planning Committee met today to discuss library service planning. She stated that they needed a logical and thoughtful plan to reach state standards.

Southwest Regional Library
Fact Sheet

Timeline

- In 2003, Mayor Jerry Abramson and the Metro Council approved the Louisville Free Public Library's Master Plan, which included three regional libraries among its recommendations for improvements.

- In February 2006, Mayor Abramson proposed and the Metro Council approved using $2 million from a one-time dividend to purchase land for three regional libraries.

- In June 2006, Mayor Abramson announced the acquisition of land for the three future regional libraries including the Southwest Regional - a 4.1-acre parcel at Dixie Highway and Kendall Road, adjacent to the Meijer store, for $1.2 million.

- In 2008, Louisville Metro Government issued $3.75 million in bonds for library improvements "requested by the Library Advisory Commission and approved by the Mayor for the Metro-wide library expansion and design services for library construction in underserved areas such as Newburg, Shively and suburban Jefferson County."

- Today, Mayor Abramson approved a request from Library Director Craig Buthod and the Library Advisory Commission to move forward with design of the first of the three regional libraries – the Southwest Regional.

Next Steps

- The Louisville Free Public Library will soon begin the process of designing the new Southwest Regional Library by soliciting community input from library patrons and other residents of southwest Jefferson County.

- The Southwest Regional Library was chosen for development first because of the high rent the library currently pays (more than $240,000 a year) in a shopping center in Valley Station; loss of the center’s anchor tenant, Kroger’s, has resulted in a decline in traffic to the center and the library.

- A tentative timetable for development of the Southwest Regional Library:
  - Summer / Fall 2010 community input meetings
  - 2010 / 2011 architectural design
  - 2012 / 2013 construction
The Landmark Initiative
The Louisville Free Public Library

Conceptual Plan

Objective: To rebuild, restore, and refresh the historic Main Library, going beyond flood recovery to bring back the greatness of the original Carnegie Library as a Louisville centerpiece for education and community life.

Tasks and Projects: Flood recovery work will include the complete rebuilding of nearly 60,000 square feet of the library’s operations center and historic stacks. All walls, floors, carpets, ceilings, lighting, ductwork and finishes in this area will be replaced. All mechanical, electrical, and lighting systems will be rebuilt, along with four elevators and all damaged windows and doors.

Beyond the flood damage, the initiative will build a new children’s library, a teen center, and a new auditorium in the historic 1908 building. The great hall at the York Street entrance will be returned to its former grandeur, and the second-floor reading rooms will be restored to house an expanded Job Shop and adult education programs. The grand windows in the 1908 building will be replaced with historically appropriate but energy-efficient insulated windows. The building systems will be replaced with energy-efficient technology.

The new children’s wing, teen library, and auditorium will become the library’s proudest spaces, with attractive furnishings, new book collections and cutting-edge technology. Wall and floor finishes in the public spaces will be upgraded to convey the impression of the library as a community asset of great worth and importance.

Included in the overall project will be landscape improvements around the 1969 building, and cleaning, sealing, and preserving of the historic exterior limestone of the 1908 building.

Overall Cost of the initiative, including flood recovery, is expected to be between $11.5 and $12 million.

Proposal: That the Library Advisory Commission commit $250,000 from the quasi-endowment funds to this project.

That the Library Advisory Commission will take individual actions to accept future bequests on behalf of the Louisville Free Public Library, without adding restrictions beyond the donor’s instructions, and that those funds will be placed in the Library Advisory Commission’s R-Fund for management and investment by the Library Foundation. These funds will be subject to the recall provision established by the Louisville Free Public Library Board of Trustees in its December 9, 1986 agreement with the Library Foundation.

A motion to adopt the resolution below was entered by Carol Mullins, seconded by Steve Amsler and approved unanimously.

RESOLUTION:

Whereas the Library Advisory Commission (LAC) wishes to support reasonable expenses of the Library Foundation in three specific areas of its operations:
• the management of investments (since the LAC’s funds represent a large portion of the foundation’s invested funds),
• office operations (since the foundation office handles all check writing, accounting, record-keeping and audit functions for the LAC’s funds),
• and fundraising for the library (since the library is the direct or indirect beneficiary of the significant fundraising the foundation does, and the LAC does no direct fundraising of its own),

And whereas the Library Advisory Commission wishes that a greater proportion of donors’ general contributions to the Library Foundation be made available to the Library for its programs, activities and collections than is currently possible due to the cost of these three areas of foundation operations,

And whereas the Library Advisory Commission wishes to encourage the Library Foundation to establish a Sustainers Group comprising donors who each give $1,000 annually to support the foundation’s operating and fundraising costs,

Therefore be it resolved that the Library Advisory Commission will make a payment after each fiscal quarter to the Library Foundation equal to the amount of 1.25% of the total value of three Library Advisory Commission funds (Library Operating Fund #1, Library Undesignated Fund #2 and the R-Fund), up to a maximum of $120,000 per year, for two years, with the intention that the foundation be able to point to these funds as a matching donation to encourage donors to join the Sustainers Group. After two years, the Library Advisory Commission intends to evaluate both the Commission’s financial position and the progress of the Sustainers campaign. If the Commission is able, and the Sustainers program is successful, the intention of the Library Advisory Commission thereafter is to match Sustainers’ donations one-to-one, up to the annual maximum of $120,000 or 5% of the value of the three above-named funds, whichever is less.

This resolution is subject to agreement by the Library Foundation Board of Trustees that it will actively pursue the Sustainers Group campaign in foundation’s next fiscal year, and to the good faith pursuit of that campaign by the Library Foundation’s board and staff.
